Foreword.

Under rule 24(1) of the Assembly Conduct of Election Rules and the corresponding rule 10(1) of the Council Conduct Rules, Returning Officers are empowered to select for each constituency as many polling stations as they think necessary. At the first general election under the reformed constitution polling stations were selected mainly on the principles enunciated by the Indian Franchise Committee. After the elections, Returning Officers were asked to re-examine the polling schemes with a view to their publication for use at future elections. The original schemes, as amended on the suggestions of Returning Officers, are published in this volume. Alternative schemes have also been framed for certain labour constituencies.

2. The purpose of bringing these schemes together in a printed volume is to provide a general guide for the use of both officials and candidates. It is not intended that the schemes should be rigid. Polling stations may require alteration according to changes in the number of voters, natural configuration or other causes. Returning Officers are free to choose such polling stations as they consider most suitable, but any changes should be reported to the Home Department to enable the department to issue correction slips to this volume.

R. N. GILCHRIST,

*Reforms Commissioner and Joint Secretary
(Ex-officio) to the Government of Bengal.*
